ALA Mentorship Program

The ALA Mentorship Program facilitates a connection between students and early career professionals just starting out in the field of laboratory automation and those professionals already established in the field while attending the LabAutomation2010 conference and exhibition (You!).

How it works?

- Complete the short bio/submission form below;
- Submit this form via email to amcgorry@labautomation.org;
- Your profile will be listed online at <http://www.labautomation.org/LA10/mentorshipprogram.cfm> for student and early career professional attendees to view;
- Once your bio is identified for connection by a student or early career professional, you will be contacted by ALA Staff and, if you agree, connected to that student or early career professional via email or telephone;
- The mentor and the student are responsible for working together to set meetings, and to discuss preferred rules for ongoing communications and engagement;
- Meetings may be a lunch, attending a session, or simply walking the exhibit hall together.
